Training the Next Generation of Archaeologists: The Society of Black Archaeologists and Sustainable Archaeology

Wednesday, February 7, 2018

12 pm—1:30 pm, The Black Forum (Haines Hall 153)

Justin Dunnavant received his Ph.D. in Anthropology at the University of Florida. His research explored the intersection of archaeology, identity, and the politics of representation among the Wolaita of southern Ethiopia. This talk provides an overview of the founding of the Society of Black Archaeologists and its current projects. Dunnavant will outline his most recent collaboration establishing a joint maritime-terrestrial sustainable archaeology field school at the Estate Little Princess in St. Croix, USVI.

The event is free and open to the public. Parking can be purchased at Parking Structure 5 (Sycamore Court & Royce Drive). UCLA is a Smoke and Tobacco-Free campus.
